SELECTION EVENT FORMAT

ROUNDS

- All teams will compete in three round robin races
- Following the first three round robins, all division will be cut to the top 8 crews based on point score
- An additional two round robin races for top 8 crews will be seeded by point score. Point score continues from first three rounds.
- Following the last round robin race, three crews will be taken to the final series based on point score from all five races
- At the completion of the Round Robin racing any crews on equal points who are in contention to qualify for future racing, or to determine an overall final result (if no finals are planned to be conducted - see notes below), result shall be decided on the following basis:
 - a) The crews involved will be compared firstly on head-to-head results, with the winner of the head-to-head qualifying to the next (elimination) round of racing. For example, if Crew A and Crew B only raced each other in heat two of the second round and Crew A beat Crew B in that race, then Crew A will qualify for the next round.
 - b) If the crews have not raced each other, or are still equal after comparing head-to-head results, the relative places from all round robin racing will be reviewed and the crew with the highest individual placing will proceed over the other crews. For example, if one of the crews on equal points has a first place, they will proceed over other crews who did not receive a first place in the rounds. This comparison will continue for second, third etc., places until there is a clear qualifier.

- c) If the crews are still equal after both of these comparisons, then the round robin result will be declared a dead heat between the crews involved (as per Rule 2.24). All crews achieving the dead heat will share the round robin finish result and/or be allowed to progress in the competition.

FINAL SERIES

- The Final Series will consist of three rounds, with all three crews required to compete in all three races
